Advice to the Traveller - a Seminar on Travel Health

Description

In 1990, the first seminar on "Advice to the Traveller - a Seminar on Travel Health" was conducted at the Fairfield Hospital. This seminar continues to be given every few years as travel health is extremely important to practising physicians and general practitioners. It is also a common issue in medical practice, particularly as an increasing number of Australians are travelling overseas each year and are often visiting remote and underdeveloped destinations. This seminar aims to provide you with up to date information on advice to the traveller and includes important topics, new and emerging issues and case examples.
